TO-MORROW.

Sunday, October 16. THE SUNDAY WORLD for to-morrow will be a brilliant and also a considerate newspaper. It will say less about Christopher Columbus than any other newspaper in the world. It will be a paper especially pleasing to the young. and to those among the old who retain young feelings. There will be a good deal about love in it. Two stories are pub. lished with the most tender feelings for mainsprings. They are well selected to please those who are crossed in love and those whose silly emotions are running along smoothly. One of them ends most cheerfully, with plenty of money for the young folks and with despair for the stepmother. The other has a gloomy ending, as the waywardness of the young we han brings about the death of the

This is a novel which fills eighteen columps of THE SUNDAY WORLD. It is just enough to make an afternoon's reading. This story by Besant, is the cheerful love story which The SUNDAY WORLD presents. It tells of two young women and of two young men, all four very miserable, and of an uncle very poor. The four young ones are very happy and the uncle very rich as the story ends. It is a wholesome improbable story, and the fool man in the BIG WISE TORTOISES. who wears a sort of divided skirt costume gets what he deserves. If you have a sister or daughter or cousin at school ad her this story. It will cheer her up, and just suit her years.

MISS MASTERS.

Miss Beatrice Whithy wrote this short story. It has not been published before It Is THE SUNDAY WORLD'S PROPERT LOVE story. It is meant to bring young women with vile tempers to a realizing sense of their ways and to make them resolve never again to be bad. It is printed in day, in THE WORLD, Mr. William S. Walsh stated in a general way that woman was not considerate. He even said that she was etymologically inconsiderate, inasmuch as she could not consider. THE SUNDAY WORLD printed Mr. Waish's opinion because of its fondness for free thought in a free country. Personally THE SUNDAY WORLD sees nothing in woman except what is beautiful, affect tionate, loyal, self-sacrificing, devoted, disinterested, reliable, brilliant, educational, ennobling, elevating and inspiring. But if an able man such as Mr. Walsh has a contrary opinion to present THE SUNDAY WORLD knows that it should be heard. To-morrow women who may have been grieved by Mr. Walsh's article of a week ago will read with delight the replies that brilliant women have made to the outspoken iconoclast. Helen Watterson replies to Mr. Walsh most delightfully and most fully. She takes up Mr. Walsh's statements in detail, and whenever she does not care to make a specific answer she says "fiddlesticks" in a most convincing tone. She says that Mr. Walsh was brought up from a blind and ungrateful babyhood to a manhood of the same description. At this Mr. Walsh will smile and be anxious to know Helen Watterson as he is far from blind or ungrateful and is perhaps even having some fun with a class whom at
